

Danna Beal, M.Ed.

Danna Beal, M.Ed. is a workplace culture expert, international speaker, author, and coach residing in Bellevue, WA. She has been on over 70 radio and TV talk shows throughout the country, sharing the compelling in her book, “The Extraordinary Workplace: Replacing Fear with Trust and Compassion”. She has been a keynote speaker and workshop leader for over 300 businesses on her new model for “Enlightened Leadership”; creating harmony, teamwork, engagement, and extraordinary success. Her interest in expanding human potential has been a thread throughout her life. She is committed to helping people everywhere be restored to their authentic selves through a process that illuminates and brings clarity to the drama, complex and misunderstood relationships in the workplace.

Addressing the current situation of 70% Americans being disengaged in the workplace (Gallup Report) and identifying the unrecognized costs to businesses when the work environment is filled with emotional drama and power struggles, she share the steps for her model of “Enlightened Leadership”. Her work rebuilds relationships and increases teambuilding, loyalty, synergism and success. “When every person can contribute in a cooperative environment, businesses succeed at a level unattainable in a competitive, fear based atmosphere.” Her specialty in healthcare was a result of working with medical practices, hospitals, imaging centers, surgery centers and conferences for healthcare executives. Residing in Bellevue, WA, she holds a B.A. from Washington State University and a M.Ed. from Whitworth University. Speaking engagements include, to name a few:
